After the kaika, it usually takes 5 to 10 days to... By Joe Mignano: April 9, 2018 With the cherry blossom that officially opened on April 1st, the city recently enjoyed its most beautiful period. By Stefan Schauwecker: April 27, 2018 The park is at its best and, if the dry and calm climate expected for the next few days passes, I expect the cherry blossoms to remain splendid until the end of the week... In 2022, cherry blooms should open more or less by their average time, except in northern Japan, where they are expected to open earlier than average. Today I returned to the Fuji Five Lakes area, almost a week after my last trip to check... After several weeks of warmer weather than usual. By Joe Mignano: March 27, 2018 We are in the second week of our annual reports on sakuras and almost all cities from Kyushu to Kanto have announced opening of their first flowers (kaika), with exception of a few cities. By Sam Evans: April 25, 2018 During my visit early this morning I discovered that the flowers were about to bloom, and in the hours that have passed since then I expect many petals in some parts of the park to be now vibrantly visible... Di Raina Ong: March 30, 2018 And a full blooming and sunshine this week as the cherry blossoming season is now in full swing. Temperatures, rain and wind have a strong effect on the seasonal process, for example, they can accelerate, delay or shorten it considerably. By Sam Evans: April 11, 2018 The cherry blossom front moved north, and this week, we are checking the cherry blossoms in the cities at higher altitudes such as Five Lakes Fuji and the Tohoku region. By Sam Evans: April 5, 2018 Almost a week in April, the front cherry blossom has been constantly towards the Tohoku region and at higher altitudes. By Sam Evans: 6 April 2018 Cherry blossoms are now hitting full bloom this week in Japan's northern Tohoku region and high-altitude areas such as Mount Yoshino and Mount Fuji area, while the season in western and southern Japan is just... By Raina Ong: March 25, 2018 This year the cherry blossom season so far has been about a week earlier than the average year due to the warmer temperatures in March. By Raina Ong: April 2, 2018 After a hot and sunny week in full bloom last week, cherry blossoms throughout western Japan and as far north as Tokyo were approaching the end of their best viewing periods on Monday. By Sam Evans: April 20, 2018 Today I was in nearby Kitakami and its famous Tenshochi Park. Forecasts published before the beginning of March, in particular, have not rarely been somewhat inaccurate in the past. By Stefan Schauwecker: 26 March 2018 The cherry blossom season is currently underway in western, central and eastern Japan. By Raina Ong: March 19, 2018 By Raina Ong: 10 April, 2018 Today I was in Sendai to see how they were making the flowers there. Use these forecasts at your own risk. By Raina Ong: March 31, 2018 As the warm and sunny spring weather continues throughout Japan, so does the cherry blossom season with many cities in Western, Central and Eastern Japan currently in full bloom and in their best viewing period. While some trees looked fine on their way to full bloom and others a little behind the pitch, generally the flowers in the area seemed to be about to open this morning... Best viewing times are estimated by japan-guide.com. By Sam Evans: 7 April 2018 The front of cherry moves towards the north and towards the highest quotas, and almost on his last legs in town like Tokyo and Kyoto. From my visit this morning, though, rain showers and other winds have arrived, and these, suspicious, will now have now finished the best viewing period of the area... Confronted... The weather is... By Raina Ong: April 5, 2018 The cherry blossom season is almost over in the major cities of Tokyo and Kyoto. This year's sakura season has been so far about a week earlier than the average... After almost a month of hot temperatures, flowers all over the country blossomed almost a week ahead of average... By Raina Ong: March 23, 2018 Despite a cold snap that brought low temperatures to the region, I found that the petal progression had not been much affected and that today the sakuras were still on track to reach their optimal visual state before average, with some areas already well on their way to full bloom. The sakura season in the West, the Centre and the East... Sakura season has reached its peak in cities like Sendai and Fukushima... Thanks to the extra push, the flowers... By Joe Mignano: April 5, 2018 Although some trees have passed away, there are still some bags of cherry trees from the next blooming that are in an optimal state of observation, and that should withstand the rain forecast for the next two days to remain spectacular even next week... By Sam Evans: April 26, 2018 Today I was in the city of Kakunodate. By Raina Ong: March 27, 2018 The 2018 cherry blossoming season is rapidly reaching its most beautiful viewing period this week in Tokyo and many other locations in southern Japan after a few unusually hot weeks. By Raina Ong: April 3, 2018 The sakura season is coming to an end in Tokyo and Kyoto and is moving northward. By Raina Ong: April 1, 2018 It is now the end of March and in the last two weeks we have been chasing the cherry blossom front from Kyushu to Kanto.
